The Cochin Children Bill.

Mr. Thomas Manjuran.—Sir, I rise to move that the Cochin Children Bill may be read in Council.

Mr. P. V. Subramania Ayyar.—I second it.

Mr. Thomas Manjuran.—The primary object of the Bill is to control youthful offenders so as to redeem them wherever possible and to save them from a criminal life. The Bill contemplates that youthful offenders after conviction may be sent to Reformatories in our State or elsewhere so that they may reform and be saved from a criminal life. There is one chapter in the Bill dealing with children who are not youthful offenders, but who are likely to get into trouble and whose habits are likely to get them into trouble by associating with bad society. There is provision for looking after such children also. This measure which has been passed into law in British India and in several other Indian States exists practically in all the civilised countries of the world. I think such youths should be protected as far as possible from straying and that we should redeem them as far as possible. I do not wish to say anything more on this subject. I will be presently moving that the Bill may be referred to a Select Committee.
